Deeds Hidden in an Arm-Chair-A Man Paid to Steal Them-Hunting for the Descendants of Gabriel Pettersson. (Philadelphia Times, June 20.) DERSOL'S OR FAMILIES IN ANY WAY RE-PERSONS OR FARILLES IN ANY WATER-lated with the Peterson (Pettersson) fam-ily, which settled in this country in the 17th century, will find it to their own interest to report their names and addresses to 1001 Og-den street, Philadelphia.

Rev. Martin J. England, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church, on Ninth street, below Buttonwood, lives at 1031 Ogden street, the address given in the above ad vertisement. A man named Peterson, who thought he might have an interest in the matter, called at Mr. England's home last evening in quest of information. Pastor England is quite a handsome man, of about the me dium height and rather stoutly built. He has a large, full, clear cut face, adorned by a full sandy beard. A pair of big, laughing blue eyes shine through a pair of goldrimmed spectacles. His appearance is one that at once inspires confidence and makes the visitor feel completely at his ease.

When Mr. Peterson stated his business, Mr. England said: "The gentleman who advertised is not here, but I act in his place. The ostensible reason for getting the families together is for a grand family reunion. The people we want are descend ants of Gabriel Pettersson, who was active ir the Revolutionary War. The family name was originally Pettersson, but it has been modified to Peterson.

MILLIONS OF DOLLARS INVOLVED.

Upon further questioning he said: "The reunion is not the sole reason for our advertising. There are millions and millions of collars worth of property involved, and we wish to find the heirs to this property and all descendants of Gabriel Petterrson. There is a great deal of property in this city involved. I may say, indeed, the larger portion of the old city of Philadelphia and extending down the river to Wil-mington, where there is also a very large mington, where there is also a very large tract of land which was originally the prop-erty of the Peterson family. We have ad-vertised in Wilmington for the heirs of Gabriel Petterson, but in advertising in this city we thought that simply mentioning the Peterson family would be sufficient.

"We do not receive many callers through the advertisement, but I have received a great number of letters, with the names and addresses of people who may or may not be descendants of Gabriel Petterson.

THE PETTERSSONS OF SWEDEN. The Petterssons who came and settled in this country were all good people and all highly respectable. They were king's officers, army and navy officers, and some eventually became office s in the American armies. Of course, you will understand that it is quite difficult for the people to be positive that they are of the same family. although it is quite a large one, numbering fully 500 persons. Intermarriage with English and French families by the Swedish families might have the effect of obliterating a portion of their pedigrees. Then, again, we must have a person's entire family history in the shape of a sworn affidavit, showing that he is really a member of this family.

"There has been quite a contest going on for years over this estate and I believe that the people are now going to see what can be done to reclaim it. Some of the family are quite wealthy. There now one Peter son in Wilmington worth over a million

For a number of years an old arm-chair lay knocking around from one place to an other. Nobody wanted it or would have. anything to do with it. Finally it was made a present to a man named Smith, who is a well-to-do and quite prominent lawyer. One day while making some slight repairs to the chair he made quite a discovery. Concealed in the cushion of the chair was a secret drawer or box, and much to his amazement, concealed in this compartment were the long-lost and much-wanted deeds and papers. Mr. Smith, however, has succeeded in holding on to them ever since, not they will do him a penny's worth of good, but simply through personal spite. The papers can no doubt be recovered after his death, but it is desirable that they be got hold of as soon as possible. No one has ever seen these papers, yet everybody knows that Smith has them and won't give them up, as he holds them secure through some legal technicality. A THIEF PAID TO STEAL THEM.

"Numerous efforts have been made time and again to gain possession of the papers, but without avail. Some years ago the parties who now advertise made a gigantic effort to get hold of them and spent fully $5,600 doing so. So great was the desire to get hold of the papers that an attempt was made to rob Smith's hopse and to do was actually employed ansuccessful. I tell you, sir, h my name was Peterson I would hunt the matter up and make diligent inquiries as to my pedigree. and my advice o you is to do the same, for you may find great property and will probably eventually gain your share. "If a reunion of the family takes place it will probably not come off until fall, as these people are now away from the city. We are expected to learn of all the members of the family if possible, as we are not done advertising yet and shall do considerable [Philadelphia Times, June 21.] Lawyer J. Ernest Smith, of Wilming ton, Del., who is alleged to be the custodian of the valuable papers belonging to the Peterson estate, is at present attending the Chicago Convention. A reporter yesterday visited Wilmington to verify the statements of Pastor England and trace the Peterson family, whose claim to millions of dollars' worth of property was published yesterday.

The story that the deeds to the property were held by Lawyer J. Ernest Smith, who, it was said, found them in an old arm-chair and that a man was paid to steal them, was the main topic of conversation

Arthur H. Smith, the younger brother of Lawyer Smith, was seen at his office. He disclaimed all knowledge of the armchair, or of the existence of such papers. He said, however, that an attempt had been made to rob his brother's house some years ago by a man who was so disguised as to make his appearance very much like that of Lawyer Smith. He never knew the object of the attempted robbery, as the fellow succeeded in making good his escape. A visit was next made to Lawyer Smith's home, at 1006 Jefferson street, but there

TATNALL'S STATEMENT. mother-in-law, Mrs. Tatnall, whose grounds adjoin those of Mr. Smith, said: There is an old chair in Mr. Smith's house, but I don't believe that it ever belonged to any of the Peterson family. I know that it has no secret drawer or box, and I never heard anything of his having any papers belonging to that estate. There was an attempt made to rob his house some years ago. There were large numbers of people, mostly young women, in the house that evening, and all were going out to a party. The man got into Mr. Smith's room, and when he was discovered by a over my face and body, I took eighteen servant, he said to her: "Won't you come and shake hands with me?" The girl at me no good. Walter Tatnall, who is a brother-in-law of J. Ernest Smith, and whose wife is a direct descendant of the old Pettersson family, said that he knew nothing of the matter whatever, but if such papers exist ed he would have heard of them through his wife. The only other person in Wilmington who could be located as a descendant of the Pettersson family is Paschall H. Peterson, of 1101 French street, who was yefterday appointed a police sergeant by Mayor-elect Harrington.

THE PETTERSSON FAMILY.

The story as published has created a great deal of comment in Wilmington, as the Pettersson family is one of the oldest in the State of Delaware and has always b en known as a very wealthy family. The first member of the family to land on these shores was Cles Petterson, who came here and acquired a tract of land 62x300 feet, on April 16, 1657. Following him came other members of the family, and the amount of property which they acquired was simply enormous, one grant alone covering what is now the city of Wilmington. This grant was made on April 16, 1675. John Stallcop on that day conveyed to Samuel Petterson the greater part of his estate, beginning at a thornbush in the middle of French street and on a line with the south side of Water street, thence easterly up the middle of French street to a point between middle of French streets, thence by a Third and Fourth streets, thence by a northwesterly course across the square at Fourth and Market streets diagonally to a stake near Rattlesnake run, thence in a southwesterly direction to a small rivulet southwesterly direction to a small rivulet on the Christians river below the point below the point at Front and West streets. This truct of land covers the entire business portion of the town. Another large tract of land was granted to Hans Pettersson, who settled in Dela-ware before 1688. His land started on Vertrecht Hook and ran along the Delsware to the Rockland manor, a distance of two miles. He lived on this land between Vertrecht Hook and She pot creek, and the quaint old building, which was then called a mansion, is still standing, looking somewhat the worse for wear. A large number of other members of the family were found, to whom vast amounts of land were OLD OFFICE-HOLDERS. The family were well known and several of them held public office. Adam Pettersson was appointed a Justice of the Peace on June 8, 1695, and Andrew Pettersson filled the same office from August 5, 1726. Hans Pettersson was a member of the New Castle Council in 1685.

The family and their property can be easily traced until as late 1787, but after tnat all traces of them were lost, and in no instance is the name of Gabriel Pettersson mentioned, although the fact is referred to that some of the family engaged in the Revolutionary war. The fact is also on record that the family was among the first founders of the Swedish Church in this

The case of Captain Thomas O. Selfridge, of the United States navy, has puzzled the authorities at Washington for some time. Selfridge, while off the coast of Japan, shelled a rock on what he thought was an uninhabited island. Six of the shells failed to explode. It turned out that the island was inhabited, and a committee of prominent Japanese went down to the beach and exmined the shells. In attempting to open one of the missiles an explosion took place, killing four men and wounding seven. The Japanese minister at Washington made a complaint, and Selfridge was tried by court martial and acquitted. The secretary of war disapproved the finding of the court but released Selfridge from ar-The secretary expressed the opinion that a naval officer had no right to shell a Japanese island for target practice without first obtaining permission from the Japanese government.

The water drove them further and further back into the cave, until they found it impossible to recede further. To avoid the rise of the water several of the boys climbed as high up the walls of the cave as possible. Others had no alternative but to stand pressed up against the end of the cavern and allow the water to gradually creep in upon them. Higher and higher rose the water, and deeper and deeper the lads became im-mersed until some of them were covered up to the shoulders. They all managed, lowever, to keep erect, notwithstanding their weakened condition, procured by shouting for help and numbness from being compelled to stand in the water. Now and then a broken wave would dash in among them, rendering their position still more perilous. In the meantime the lads had been missed from their homes, and their continued absence caused inquiries to be made. This resulted in their whereabouts becoming known. A rumor then got abrord that all the boys had been drowned, and soon fathers, mothers, brothers, sister and a large body of other men, women and children rushed off in eager haste to the top of the cliff. There was no way of reaching them from the fore, be done by the hundreds of people who had collected but to wait until the fall of the tide would admit of access to the cave from the shore. Meanwhile the imprisoned boys passed a terrible time; but just when they thought the worst had come the water stopped rising. Slowly the water left the cave, and in a short time they felt themselves in comparative safety, although in darkness. It was, however, 10:30 o'clock at night before they were rescued.

A Mother's Terrible Crime. PITTSBURG, June 20 .- Mrs. Josephine March, who lived in a tenement house on Sycamore street, this morning murdered her two young children, Mary and Helen. by administering strychnine, and then ended her own life by drinking the fatal drug. OP ARKLING CATAWBA SPRINGS. A third child was given some of the poi son and its life now hangs by a thread.
The motive for the terrible deed is believed to have been anger, because her husband turned from the house a young man whom he suspected of intimacy with her. It was her intention to kill the entire family, but her husband refused to drink the cup of milk in which lurked his death.

Early this morning she purchased an ounce of strychnine from a drug store near by, saying she wanted it to poison rats. Returning to her home, she placed the poison in a pitcher of milk, which she gave to her children at breakfast. They drank, but her husband refused, because he did not care to drink milk. An hour later the unfortunate woman and two of her children were dead. Emma, her little four-year-old girl, whose life was despaired of, is apparently better this evening, and the physicians now have some hopes that she may be saved. She has had two convulsions and paralysis of the limbs, but it is believed that the antidote, which is administered at intervals, will prove effective.
